FAZE FOCUS--

A theatre production in need of a sound track, an instructor in need of a computer program, a lady in need of a trusted mechanic where can they turn for help? At GSU the answer is easy. Call Jerry Reich in ICC.

Celebrating his fifth year with the University, Jerry, a man of varied interests and talents ranging from motor mechanics to electronics and chemistry, has developed a reputation as the man with the answers--or most of them at any rate.

Jerry was employed at Zenith Radio Corporation in Chicago as an Associate Engineer in Physical and Analytical Services when he decided to return to school to complete his education. Drawn to GSU by its promise of innovative methods of education and the opportunity to create a program tailored to his individual needs, he enrolled as a part-time student at the warehouse University in 1972. Tiring of commuting from Oak Park for evening classes, Jerry relocated nearer the University, increased his class load, and began working in ICC in Equipment Distribution and repair. He is now Sound Technician, coordinating all audio productions, except TV, such as live recordings of scripts in self-instructional modules, 16 mm film sound tracks, and multi-media image productions.

GSU Theatre fans might be familiar with his work in the sound track of "Things That Go Bump in the Night," "Marriage-Go-Round" and "Antigone."

He has recorded "GSU Jazz Experience" and most recently the Jr. College Jazz Festival held here this month.

In 1975 he travelled to New York assisting with recording a GSU multimedia project and arranging a sound system at St. John the Divine Church for the presentation of "One Is the Human Spirit."

Last year he accompanied the GSU media group to film the aftermath of the 1976 Guatemalan earthquake. Results of that trip culminated in the presentation of "Survive the Trembling Earth" which was recently broadcast on Channel 11. Two complete sound tracks were produced, one in Spanish, one in English. It was quite a project," said Jerry.

Speaking as a 5 year veteran, Jerry feels that GSU has made fine progress. "We are becoming what was originally planned, a jr. college capstone, serving the more mature student. The University provides a student with in-depth knowledge of a chosen field."

"GSU's greatest asset is the number of really 'good' people here, inspired, intelligent and creative. The instructors are the best 'teachers' to be found."

Jerry said he is disturbed, however, by the loss of freedom experienced by students as GSU progresses. "It was better when a student was free to design his own path, with an individual time frame for completing work.

In 1974, Jerry earned a B.A. degree in Interdisciplinary Science/Environmental Technology and frequently serves as a community professor in EAS.

As a form of relaxation Jerry enjoys automotive repair and upkeep of electronic equipment. He also maintains a chemical laboratory in his home. "I am fascinated with the interfacing of chemistry and electronics and hope to someday return to this field," he said.

Jerry is single and resides in Park Forest.
